Dr Judith Longstaff Mackay is a British medical doctor, who has lived in Hong Kong since 1967, initially working as a hospital physician, then since 1984 concentrating on public health, especially tobacco control, in low and middle income countries. She is currently the Senior Advisor, World Lung Foundation/Bloomberg Initiative to Reduce Tobacco Use; Director of the Asian Consultancy on Tobacco Control; and Senior Policy Advisor to World Health Organisation.

She has published nearly 200 papers and addressed over 400 conferences on tobacco control. She is author or co-author of 10 atlases on health, sex, tobacco, cardiovascular disease, cancer, surveillance and oral health.

In addition to many international awards, ranging from the WHO Commemorative Medal and the TIME 100 World’s Most Influential People Award to the British Medical Journal Group’s first Lifetime Achievement Award, she has been identified by the tobacco industry as one of the three most dangerous people in the world.
