"With Asia becoming one of the major global economic engines for the next decade, the varied challenges such as growth in population, wealth creation, urbanization, aging issues and growing prevalence of chronic diseases will also be bringing unprecedented challenges for health care in the region. The issues are daunting but not insurmountable. Health care leaders will be coming together in Singapore at this regional meeting to move research and knowledge to policy and implementation in Asia and beyond."

Mr. Gan Kim Yong, Minister for Health, Singapore

Health Challenges in Asia – how can the region respond?

2013 marks the 10th anniversary of SARS. Asia was at the epicenter of the outbreak, especially Hong Kong and Singapore. Indeed, the region, like the rest of the world, has witnessed several scares and real threats since then. With the Asian region undergoing rapid socio-economic transformation, the health care landscape in Asia is also in rapid evolution. Meeting the increasing challenges of health and health care development in Asia is critical to sustain development.

Get insights from the first World Health Summit Regional Meeting – Asia 2013 (WHSRMA), to be hosted in Singapore from April 8th – 10th. Themed Health for Sustainable Development in Asia, the Summit will witness global experts and thought leaders in health care, public health and civil society coming together to discuss health care challenges in Asia.

WHSRMA 2013 will also feature a high powered Asian Ministerial Panel discussion on the impact of health on Asian economies.

Don’t miss this rendezvous with leaders in health care – including government, foundations, professional societies, academia, industry, business and corporate interests.
